Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

APPOINTMENT of an honorary Arkansas commission to call upon the other Cotton States for a South-wide study of the farm tenancy problem is announced by Governor Futrell. Inaugurated by Arkansas, this Southern movement will certainly create a good effect on the rest of the nation, which has been reading vivid accounts of share-cropper and landlord disputes in Dixie. But the history of the panic years shows that whatever their intentions the administrations of the individual states have failed completely to meet the problem of the land with action. The queer paradox is this: That because the state governments, which had legal power to act regarding land, failed to act, therefore the federal government was forced to step in with an action of doubtful legality.

38 Named on Body to Study State's Tenancy Problem

C. E. Palmer Heads Governor Futrell's Honorary Commission

TO MEET SEPT. 21
South-Wide Conference Expected to Be Reached by November

LITTLE ROCK.—Governor Futrell announced Wednesday appointment of 38 persons to his commission to study the farm-tenant and sharecropper situation in Arkansas. He asked the commission to hold its first meeting in Hot Springs Monday, September 21. The Arkansas commission is intended to form the nucleus for a South-wide conference on the same subject, to be sponsored by the governor. Governor Futrell said he was advising governors of all the cotton-growing states of the appointment of the Arkansas commission and that he hoped to assemble the Southwide meeting by November. Q. E. Palmer, of Texarkana, publisher of several south Arkansas newspapers, was named chairman of the commission. "Anyone with definite ideas and plans for a solution of the problem is invited to send such suggestions and plans to the commission," said the governor. The group will be known as "The Farm Tenancy Commission," and the governor said he desired it to make recommendations to the legislature and state administration "and probably the federal government, for the improvement of the economic status of farm tenants, and extending farm home ownership among them."

He said the group was an honorary one, and that "there is no fund available from which any expense of members of the commission can be paid." Other Commissioners Named to the commission with Mr. Palmer were: Dean Dan T. Gray of the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, Fayetteville. Dr. A. C. Miller, editor of the Arkansas Methodist, Little Rock. Superintendent J. B. Watson of the (Continued on page three)

Turned Brown By Brown Turner

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(Special)—Looks like this finding a job business is getting to be quite a fad, what with a million new jobs opening since the first of the year and payrolls up more than 42 million dollars. Funny thing about it is these economist fellows can't figure it out, being's this is election year. These European countries which can't pay their debts seem to find enough money to buy new guns and a lot of powder. They remind me of the guy who can't afford to take his wife to see a movie but can always rustle up a pint in a pinch. Looks like we're going to have to pad the trees and telephone poles along the highways if we have any people left.

Spain Bitter Against Europe

Socialist Madrid Says Embargo Is an Aid to Rebels

Government Leader Fears Fascist Nations Will Foreswear Pledges

EUROPE'S ETHIOPIA

That's Spain, Declares Angered Leader of the Socialist Republic

Copyright Associated Press
Spain's Socialist strong man, declaring his war-torn country was "the Ethiopia of Europe," burst out Thursday in a bitter denunciation of France and Great Britain. Indalecio Prieto, who, as leader of the parliamentary Socialist party, is the most important man behind the Madrid government, declared that Spain had been deserted by the very countries which should be its allies in the fight against the spread of European Fascism. The European neutrality pact, he asserted, will hurt Socialist Spain rather than help it, because, he said, Germany, Italy and Portugal will sign the pact and go on supplying arms to the Fascist rebels.

Embargo Proceeds
LONDON, Eng.—(P)—Great Britain and France, authoritative sources said Thursday, have sent a joint appeal to all European powers which have not yet placed embargoes on Spanish arms shipments, to do so at once.

Germany Reassures France
PARIS, France.—(Copyright Associated Press)—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, German minister of economics, delivered Thursday was described as assurances from Chancellor Hitler that France had nothing to fear from the Reich's increase of length of military service.

This declaration, given to Premier Leon Blum, indicated that the German prolongation of army service was undertaken only because of the recently announced increase in the Russian army.

By the Associated Press
Spain's Fascist rebels, checked on the Bay of Biscay front, gained what they called "an open road to Madrid" some 40 miles north of the capital Thursday.

In the northwest, on the Iru-San Sebastian sector, the government checked anew rebel onslaught. That area, where the rebels started a big push Wednesday, is just across from the French frontier.

VATICAN CITY, Rome, Italy.—(Copyright Associated Press)—Prelates disclosed Thursday night (European time) that Pope Pius the 11th has become so weakened from worry over the Spanish situation that he scarcely is able to rise from his throne at the closes of audiences.

Charlean West, 7, Diphtheria Victim

Funeral Service to Be Held Probably Friday Afternoon

Diphtheria caused the death Thursday of 7-year-old Charlean West, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. West of Hope Route Three. She had been ill several days.

Immediate survivors were not learned here. Funeral services, although not completed at noon Thursday, will probably be held Friday afternoon from the family residence.

Batesville Farmer Kidnaped by Penitentiary's Fugitives

Robbed of $103 and Thrown Out of Car, He Identifies Buddy Sadler as One of Trio Who Abducted Him

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—A farmer living near Batesville was robbed and temporarily abducted early Thursday by a group of men in an automobile, and state police headquarters here announced at noon that the affair was being investigated in connection with the hunt for four bank robber escapees from Cummins state prison farm. The victim, Finis Robert, robbed of $103, thrown out of the car after being gagged and bound with wire, identified a newspaper picture of Buddy Sadler, 28, one of the escapes, as one of his assailants. Robert said there were three men in the car, but he couldn't identify the others. The roads in the rugged Boston mountain area of north central Arkansas were blocked by officers Thursday in an effort to hem in Robert's assailants.

Centennial Copies to Schools Now 20

6 More Bound Copies Donated by Agee & Spragins Agency

Six more schools of Hempstead, Nevada and Lafayette counties were assured bound copies of Hope Star's 48-page Centennial edition Wednesday, bringing the total for the public schools in this section to 20 within the last two days.

The latest purchases was by Agee & Spragins Insurance Agency of Hope. Schools to receive the six bound copies of the historical edition are: Guernsey School District No. 20 "B" Falcon School District No. 1 Lanchburg School District No. 1 School District No. 21 of Lafayette county.

Patmos School Bodewad School District E. S. Greening Insurance Agency purchased 14 copies of the paper Tuesday, all to be donated to Hempstead and Lafayette county schools.

Bearden Is Praised by U. S. Authorities

Hempstead Sheriff Obtains 20 Convictions in 20 Federal Cases

Clinton R. Barry, United States attorney for the Western District of Arkansas with offices at Fort Smith, Thursday congratulated Sheriff Jim Bearden for the suppression of offenses against the national government in Hempstead county. Sheriff Bearden said that he had taken 20 felony cases to federal court in Fort Smith, all resulting in pleas of guilty by the defendants. U. S. Attorney Barry in a letter to Sheriff Bearden, said in part: "It gives me much pleasure to thank you for the hearty co-operation which you have given the United States officers in the suppression of offenses against the national government in your county."

"It has resulted in a very marked decrease in crimes against the federal government in your county and for this splendid result you are entitled to a great deal of credit. Very truly yours, "Clinton R. Barry, United States Attorney."

Test Wheat Before Planting

TOPEKA, Kas.—(P)—J. C. Mohler, secretary of the state board of agriculture, urged farmers to use care in selecting wheat seed and to beware of grain offered by itinerant truckers. He advised that seed be tested for germinability to insure good crops, adding that itinerant seed peddlers sometimes did not comply with state law that demanded seed tests and labels according to results before sale.

Traffic Light Is Installed in Hope

Automatic Signal at Third and Main Streets Is to Be Enforced

Installation of a stop-and-go light at Third and Main streets was completed Wednesday but during the first day's operation several motorists ran the red light, Police Chief John W. Riddell said Thursday.

"This violation must stop at once or motorists will be arrested and taken into municipal court," he warned. Chief Riddell laid down three simple rules. Here they are: 1. Always come to complete stop when red light flashes on. This rule will be rigidly enforced. 2. No U-turns will be permitted. 3. A turn to the right will be permitted on red light—but car driver must come to complete stop before turning to the right.

"Tourists, in general, are observing the lights and caused very little trouble during the first day's operation," he said.

"Our own people are causing most trouble. They must learn how to drive. They must obey traffic rules. Unless they do they will be arrested and taken into court."

"The lights were installed for the interest of the people, to keep down wrecks and relieve congested traffic. Now, that we have the lights, the rules will be enforced," he concluded.

Peace Conference by F. D. R. Denied

No Conversations as to Foreign Parley, President Declares

ABOARD ROOSEVELT TRAIN En Route to Bismarck, N. D.—(P)—President Roosevelt headed Wednesday night into the parched midwestern regions, leaving behind at Garrett, Ind., an expression of deep concern over "those parts of the country that had practically a total crop failure."

Turning from drought to international peace during the day, the president requested Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, who is accompanying him, to inform reporters the administration had started no conversations pointing toward a world conference on peace and disarmament. Wallace mentioned reports published in New York that the chief executive was studying the possibility of proposing such a parley if he were elected.

The secretary said that after the reports were described to him the president said there had been no conversations of any sort with reference to such a conference. Wallace said that personally he considered the reports "utterly incredible."

Farm Clubwomen 1,200 Strong to Begin Camp Sept. 1

Demonstration Clubs From All Over State to Send Delegations

SITE IS CAMP PIKE

13 Mess Halls Manned by Army Cooks Will Serve Visiting Women

Every method of conveyance, except wheelbarrow and airplane, will be employed September 1 to bring 1,200 home demonstration club women from the 75 counties of Arkansas to their annual encampment at Camp Pike near Little Rock.

Last year they came a-foot, by train, truck, bus, school bus, and car and when they arrived at camp they found everything in readiness to make camp life comfortable.

As usual, the Arkansas National Guard officers are sparing no pains or labor to make the 1936 State Home Demonstration Camp a success. District home demonstration agent, Mrs. Esther G. Gramer, states. An airplane view of the camp shows the methodical way in which the tent city is set out, and the women attending camp this year will find the grounds more beautiful, the buildings in better condition, and the streets wider than on any previous encampment. Low stone walls for curbing have been built at the street edges out far enough to allow the parking of cars on both sides, and the grounds are in excellent condition.

13 Mess Halls

Thirteen mess halls along the main street at camp head up 13 streets, along each of which 14 "six-women" tents are located. Each mess hall will easily accommodate the 84 "living" on that particular street, so that 1,092 campers will be eating on their own home streets. Negro army cooks will prepare the meals in camp utensils on army stoves, and the women will provide their own cups, plates, silver, and tea towel. After each meal, the scraps, if the hungry campers leave any, will be put in the famous "G. I." (galvanized iron) cans as the women leave the mess hall, and the dishes sudsed in another "G. I." can, and rinsed in a third, wiped, put in paper bags and carried back to the tent.

The overflow, or the 108 other campers, plus the guests, will eat at officers' mess, across from the administration building.

6 Women to a Tent
They say that eight soldiers can bunk in a squad tent, but six women, with their suitcases, seem to be all who can squeeze themselves in. Cots are furnished by the National Guard; the women bring their own sheets and blankets and they have discovered in the past that it is wise to bring cover, for even in early September, the nights are cool at camp.

Ice water on each street, incinerators, bath houses, a swimming pool, a fine auditorium in Lloyd England Hall, a canteen, where everything needed at a camp can be found and a large administration building for contests and exhibits all help to make Camp Pike an ideal camping location. "Add to this fine physical equipment, the helpful and cooperative spirit and labor furnished by the National Guard staff, and who could be more fortunate than rural women of Arkansas, who have the opportunity and pleasure afforded by our Arkansas National Guard Camp and the friendship and help of the National Guard organization," Mrs. Kramer declared.

Heart, Weakened by Influenza Attacks, Fails Him, Aged 64

Native of Utah and That State's Second Democratic Governor, Dern Won Place in Roosevelt Cabinet

WASHINGTON.—(P)—George Henry Dern, 64, Secretary of War in the Roosevelt cabinet, died in Walter Reed hospital here Thursday from an heart ailment and complications resulting from past influenza attacks.

Dr. Fritz Meyer, noted German heart specialist who was called here from Boston at the direction of President Roosevelt, was in consultation with Army doctors just before the Secretary of War died, at 9:55 a. m. During the night it was disclosed that Dern had been placed under an oxygen tent in an effort to prolong his life. From Utah.

George H. Dern, the second Democrat and the second man not a Mormon to be governor of Utah, became a national figure when President Franklin D. Roosevelt named him as secretary of war in March, 1933. He had just finished his second four-year term as governor, and went to Washington with a reputation for accomplishment gained through his efforts as one of the organizers of the seven states conference on the Boulder Dam controversy and also as one who had worked himself up from a place as bookkeeper for a mining company to a place of wide influence.

In technical mining circles he was known as joint inventor with Theodore P. Holt of the Holt-Dern ore roaster and also as aiding in the development of a vacuum slime filtration process evolved by George Moore. Dern was credited with putting both these appliances on a commercial basis.

Born in Dodge county, Nebraska, September 8, 1872, the son of John and Elizabeth D. Dern, he graduated from Fremont Normal College when only 16, then worked in freight and lumber yards to earn money with which to attend the University of Nebraska in 1893 and 1894. There he played guard and captained the football team which won one of the early championships of the Missouri Valley. Those being the days of push and pull football, brawn was one of the chief requisites for gridiron performance and young Dern had it. He was just under six feet in height and usually weighed around 175 pounds.

In the university cadet corps Dern played an alto horn in the band. The commandant of the corps was Lieut. John J. Pershing and forty years later the two were again associated when the amateur bandmen became head of the department under which the retired general of the armies had won world-wide fame.

Dern cut short his university career to accompany his parents when they moved from Nebraska to Utah. There he got a job as bookkeeper with a mining company, studied technical aspects of the industry in his spare hours and eventually became the concern's general manager. In later years his business interests included mining, dairying, canning, power and banking.

In politics he made a mark as state senator for eight years, then served as many more as governor before going to Washington.

84th Birthday for W. Powell, Patmos

70 Persons Attend Birthday Party in South End of County

Wesley Powell celebrated his 84th birthday anniversary at his home near Patmos Wednesday. Five sons and daughters were among the 70 persons present at a birthday dinner.

There were 16 grand children and 15 great grand children besides a host of other relatives and friends that took part in the observance.

Several talks and prayers were offered. The birthday dinner was held in a shady grove near the home of Mr. Powell.

5 Die, 16 Hurt in Maryland Crash

Truck Loaded With Laborers Plunges Over 50-Foot Embankment

DARLINGTON, Md.—(P)—Five persons were killed and 16 injured early Thursday as a truck loaded with laborers crashed through a guard rail and went over a 50-foot embankment at Conowingo dam. No identification marks were found.

Calipatria county, in southern California, is 175 feet below sea level.

CHAPTER I

Smart and trim in her new spring outfit, Judith Howard stepped briskly from an elevator of the town's tallest office building and made her way through the noon-hour crowd to the side spot beyond the main stream of pedestrian traffic, and waited. There were other girls waiting in the shadow of the big entrance, and there were scores of plenty of it. Not too much, but just enough.

TODAY IS OURS

them passing hurriedly on their way to lunch. But none was more pert, more honestly attractive, than Judith Howard. She had the assurance that comes only to those who have made, and are making, their own way in the world. An assurance that is different from poise, and somehow more genuine—because poise is something which can be acquired in idleness and so has nothing at all to do with character. She was medium tall, rather slender in build, and while perhaps none of her features were classic in themselves, nevertheless they formed a composite whole which was the very essence of beauty. Judith's eyes were neither blue nor gray, but something intriguingly in-between. The color of her hair was delightfully definite. In the day of Judith's mother it would have been called "tuffy" or "tow." When older men glimpsed it they were reminded happily of ripe corn in the fields of their youth. When younger men saw it they remembered no fields of maize, but they were just as pleased. And there was

Her absurd fall hat (which looked not at all absurd on Judith) made no secret of how she rolled it up at the nape of her neck, sensibly and securely. She was somewhere between 20 and 26, and it was almost impossible to tell to which age she was nearest. About the time you decided that she was hardly past 20 she would look grave and serene, and nearer 26. But if you happened to be a young man—or even an old one—you did not care particularly because, whichever age she was nearest, Judith Howard was charming.

It was just this strange quality of change, this alternating gravity and gaiety, which had attracted Stephen Fowler four years ago—and held him steadily since then. Four years is a long time when one is young, and in love, and as Judith stood there waiting for Steve, she wondered how much longer it would be before they would marry. Four years they'd known each other, and had planned to marry for at least three of those.

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

APPOINTMENT of an honorary Arkansas commission to call upon the other Cotton States for a South-wide study of the farm tenancy problem is announced by Governor Futrell. Inaugurated by Arkansas, this Southern movement will certainly create a good effect on the rest of the nation, which has been reading vivid accounts of share-cropper and landlord disputes in Dixie. But the history of the panic years shows that whatever their intentions the administrations of the individual states have failed completely to meet the problem of the land with action. The queer paradox is this: That because the state governments, which had legal power to act regarding land, failed to act, therefore the federal government was forced to step in with an action of doubtful legality.

38 Named on Body to Study State's Tenancy Problem

C. E. Palmer Heads Governor Futrell's Honorary Commission

TO MEET SEPT. 21

South-Wide Conference Expected to Be Reached by November

LITTLE ROCK.—Governor Futrell announced Wednesday appointment of 38 persons to his commission to study the farm-tenancy and sharecropper situation in Arkansas. He asked the commission to hold its first meeting in Hot Springs Monday, September 21.

The Arkansas commission is intended to form the nucleus for a South-wide conference on the same subject, to be sponsored by the governor.

Governor Futrell said he was advising governors of all the cotton-growing states of the appointment of the Arkansas commission and that he hoped to assemble the Southwide meeting by November.

C. E. Palmer, of Texarkana, publisher of several south Arkansas newspapers, was named chairman of the commission.

"Anyone with definite ideas and plans for a solution of the problem is invited to send such suggestions and plans to the commission," said the governor.

The group will be known as "The Farm Tenancy Commission," and the governor said he desired it to make recommendations to the legislature and state administration "and probably the federal government, for the improvement of the economic status of farm tenants, and extending farm home ownership among them."

He said the group was an honorary one, and that "there is no fund available from which any expense of members of the commission can be paid."

Other Commissioners

Named to the commission with Mr. Palmer were:

Dean Don T. Gray of the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, Fayetteville.

Dr. A. C. Miller, editor of the Arkansas Methodist, Little Rock.

Turned Brown By Brown Turner

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(Special)—Looks like this finding a job business is getting to be quite a fad, what with a million new jobs opening since the first of the year and payrolls up more than 42 million dollars. Funny thing about it is these economist fellows can't figure it out, being's this is election year.

These European countries which can't pay their debts seem to find enough money to buy new guns and a lot of powder. They remind me of the guy who can't afford to take his wife to see a movie but can always rustle up a pint in a pinch. Looks like we're going to have to pad the trees and telephone poles along the highways if we have any people left.

Spain Bitter Against Europe

Socialist Madrid Says Embargo Is an Aid to Rebels

Government Leader Fears Fascist Nations Will Forewear Pledges

EUROPE'S ETHIOPIA

That's Spain, Declares Angered Leader of the Socialist Republic

Copyright Associated Press

Spain's Socialist strong man, declaring his war-torn country was "the Ethiopia of Europe," burst out Thursday in a bitter denunciation of France and Great Britain.

Indalecio Prieto, who, as leader of the parliamentary Socialist party, is the most important man behind the Madrid government, declared that Spain had been deserted by the very countries which should be its allies in the fight against the spread of European Fascism.

"The European neutrality pact, he asserted, will hurt Socialist Spain rather than help it, because, he said, Germany, Italy and Portugal will sign the pact and go on supplying arms to the Fascist rebels."

Embargo Proceeds

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—Great Britain and France, authoritative sources said Thursday, have sent a joint appeal to all European powers which have not yet placed embargoes on Spanish arms shipments, to do so at once.

Germany Reassures France

PARIS, France.—(Copyright Associated Press)—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, German minister of economics, delivered Thursday was described as assurances from Chancellor Hitler that France had nothing to fear from the Reich's increase of length of military service.

This declaration, given to Premier Leon Blum, indicated that the German prolongation of army service was undertaken only because of the recently announced increase in the Russian army.

Spain's Fascist rebels, checked on the Bay of Biscay front, gained what they called "an open road to Madrid" some 40 miles north of the capital Thursday.

In the northwest, on the Irun-San Sebastian sector, the government checked anew rebel onslaught. That area, where the rebels started a big push Wednesday, is just across from the French frontier.

Batesville Farmer Kidnaped by Penitentiary's Fugitives

Robbed of $103 and Thrown Out of Car, He Identifies Buddy Sadler as One of Trio Who Abducted Him

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—A farmer living near Batesville was robbed and temporarily abducted early Thursday by a group of men in an automobile, and state police headquarters here announced at noon that the affair was being investigated in connection with the hunt for four bank robber escapees from Cummins state prison farm.

The victim, Finis Robert, robbed of $103, thrown out of the car after being gagged and bound with wire, identified a newspaper picture of Buddy Sadler, 28, one of the escapees, as one of his assailants.

Robert said there were three men in the car, but he couldn't identify the others.

The roads in the rugged Boston mountain area of north central Arkansas were blocked by officers Thursday in an effort to hem in Robert's assailants.

Bearden Is Praised by U. S. Authorities

Hempstead Sheriff Obtains 20 Convictions in 20 Federal Cases

Clinton R. Barry, United States attorney for the Western District of Arkansas with offices at Fort Smith, Thursday congratulated Sheriff Jim Bearden for the suppression of offenses against the national government in Hempstead county.

Sheriff Bearden said that he had taken 20 felony cases to federal court in Fort Smith, all resulting in pleas of guilty by the defendants.

U. S. Attorney Barry in a letter to Sheriff Bearden, said in part:

"It gives me much pleasure to thank you for the hearty co-operation which you have given the United States officers in the suppression of offenses against the national government in your county."

"It has resulted in a very marked decrease in crimes against the federal government in your county and for this splendid result you are entitled to a great deal of credit. Very truly yours,"

"Clinton R. Barry, United States Attorney."

Test Wheat Before Planting

TOPEKA, Kas.—(AP)—J. C. Mohler, secretary of the state board of agriculture, urges farmers to use care in selecting wheat seed and to beware of grain offered by itinerant truckers.

He advised that seed be tested for germinability to insure good crops, adding that itinerant seed peddlers sometimes did not comply with state law that demanded seed tests and labels according to results before sale.

More than 100 tons of soil from each acre of moderately sloping fields are lost every year.

Traffic Light Is Installed in Hope

Automatic Signal at Third and Main Streets Is to Be Enforced

Installation of a stop-and-go light at Third and Main streets was completed Wednesday but during the first day's operation several motorists ran the red light, Police Chief John W. Riddgill said Thursday.

"This violation must stop at once or motorists will be arrested and taken into municipal court," he warned.

Chief Riddgill laid down three simple rules. Here they are:

1. Always come to complete stop when red light flashes on. This rule will be rigidly enforced.
2. No U-turns will be permitted.
3. A turn to the right will be permitted on red light—but car driver must come to complete stop before turning to the right.

"Tourists, in general, are observing the lights and caused very little trouble during the first day's operation."

Our own people are causing most trouble. They must learn how to drive. They must obey traffic rules. Unless they do they will be arrested and taken into court.

"The lights were installed for the interest of the people, to keep down wrecks and relieve congested traffic. Now, that we have the lights, the rules will be enforced," he concluded.

Peace Conference by F. D. R. Denied

No Conversations as to Foreign Parley, President Declares

ABOARD ROOSEVELT TRAIN En Route to Bismarck, N. D.—(AP)—President Roosevelt headed Wednesday night into the parched midwestern regions, leaving behind at Garrett, Ind., an expression of deep concern over "those parts of the country that had practically a total crop failure."

Turning from drought to international peace during the day, the president requested Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, who is accompanying him, to inform reporters the administration had started no conversations pointing toward a world conference on peace and disarmament.

Wallace mentioned reports published in New York that the chief executive was studying the possibility of proposing such a parley if he were re-elected.

The secretary said that after the reports were described to him the president said there had been no conversations of any sort with reference to such a conference.

Wallace said that personally he considered the reports "utterly incredible."

CHAPTER 1

Smart and trim in her new spring outfit, Judith Howard stepped briskly from an elevator of the town's tallest office building and made her way through the noon-hour crowd to the side spot beyond the main stream of pedestrian traffic, and waited.

There were other girls waiting in the shadow of the big entrance, and there were scores of plenty of it. Not too much, but just enough.

TODAY IS OURS

them passing hurriedly on their way to lunch. But none was more pert, more honestly attractive, than Judith Howard. She had the assurance that comes only to those who have made, and are making, their own way in the world. An assurance that is different from poise, and somehow more genuine—because poise is something which can be acquired in idleness and so has nothing at all to do with character.

She was medium tall, rather slender in build, and while perhaps none of her features were classic in themselves, nevertheless they formed a composite whole which was the very essence of beauty. Judith's eyes were neither blue nor gray, but something intriguingly in-between. The color of her hair was delightfully definite. In the day of Judith's mother it would have been called "tuffy" or "low." When older men glimpsed it they were reminded happily of ripe corn in the fields of their youth. When younger men saw it they remembered no fields of maize, but they were just as pleased. And there was

Her absurd fall hat (which looked not at all absurd on Judith) made no secret of how she rolled it up at the nape of her neck, sensibly and securely.

She was somewhere between 20 and 26, and it was almost impossible to tell to which age she was nearest. About the time you decided that she was hardly past 20 she would look grave and serene, and nearer 26. But if you happened to be a young man—or even an old one—you did not care particularly because, whichever age she was nearest, Judith Howard was charming.

It was just this strange quality of change, this alternating gravity and gaiety, which had attracted Stephen Fowler four years ago—and held him steadily since then. Four years is a long time when one is young, and in love, and, as Judith stood there waiting for Steve, she wondered how much longer it would be before they would marry. Four years they'd known each other, and had planned to marry for at least three of those.

YOUR HEALTH

By Dr. Morris Fishbein

College students, a recent survey establishes, are taller and built better than those who do not go to college. The reason for this is still a matter of conjecture, but apparently boys and girls who are destined for college grow more quickly during their childhood, and attain earlier age than does the rest of the population.

Studies made in various parts of the world indicate that brighter children generally are taller and heavier than average children of the same age. This, of course, cannot be taken to mean that big children necessarily are brighter than smaller ones, since racial factors have a great deal to do with body development.

It is possible, however, that the economic condition of the family able to send its children to college may have something to do with the development of these youngsters.

The provision of good food and housing, and of proper hygiene during childhood, must certainly be important in bringing about better developed children from a physical point of view. It is reported, for example, that the average income of families of students of the University of Minnesota is in the upper 30 per cent bracket of family incomes in general.

Recently, height and weight measurements were recorded for 23,000 college men and 17,000 college women. The American college woman, at the age of 16, it was found, is heavier than the girl who does not go to college. By the age of 19, the girl who not gone to college weighs more, but is not as tall.

College men are taller and heavier, at the age of 16, than men who do not go to college, and they keep on getting bigger and heavier than the others. College students of today are physically superior to college students of an earlier day. Vassar students in 1922 were 1.3 inches taller than they were 37 years ago.

Over a period of 30 years, men in the University of Minnesota have increased three-fourths of an inch in height and four pounds in weight.

Harvard students today average 1 1/4 inches taller and eight pounds heavier than did their fathers when they were undergraduates at Harvard. All this would seem to point to the fact that a proper knowledge of hygiene and the right kind of food in youth, as well as control of physical disease and physical education, can do much to promote bigger and healthier children.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

"Oh, let's play school," said Louella, suddenly.

"I don't want to play school," said Sue. "I don't want to do anything."

"But you can be principal. I'll be teacher. Oh, come on. There's no use yelling because we can't go fishing with mother and dad and the Smiths. We can play old-fashioned school and be lots of fun."

"How do you play old-fashioned school?"

"Oh, you smack the kids and scold them and crack the rattan over the desk and ring bells and mark everything wrong. You don't have to smile and say sweetly, 'That is very nice, Jimmymums, I am so proud of you.'"

Sue showed some interest. "Where will we get a school? You can't teach chairs."

Selecting the Victims

"Why, I'll go over and get the little Smiths. Carl and Tibby have had their naps and they're just mooning around till their folks come home. Annie will be glad to get rid of them. And they will be glad to have something to do. I'll show them how. Anyway, Carl is going to start to school soon and it will be good for him. We can show him his letters."

"If they're bad, can I smack them?" asked Sue doubtfully. "I'd rather be teacher."

"Will you help? Come on now. We'll get them."

The Smiths were all interested. They sat on the lower step with chairs for desks and after certain coachings were able to answer "present" or "absent" with dexterity when the teacher called several dozen names. They marched to the crashing cadence of the fly swatter, around the house and six times around the swing, while Sue slapped her hands, and sometimes them, for getting out of step. Then the lessons began.

In Terror of Lessons

"They couldn't make 'A's," let alone all the other letters Louella wrote with chalk on the side of the cottage. For this they got smacked. Then they said they were going home. For this they were smacked and stood in corners, forcibly. When they cried they were smacked soundly. When they continued to cry they were told by their zealous instructors that they ought to be ashamed. When they went to school in earnest the teachers would dire things when they cried. "You never, never could cry in school."

Finally Annie rescued the martyrs of two little girls' over-growing enthusiasm for searing the unfortunate youngsters out of their wits. But young Carl was dismayed and disturbed later that evening when he announced with eyes as big as saucers and lips trembling that he never intended to go to school. And worried still more when he cried out in his sleep, "Teacher, I don't know how. I can't make those letters on my paper. I can't never learn."

And only last April, when she was 18, Miss Dudley suffered a heart attack from a 22 rifle while she was in the apartment of Sidney Kingsley, 30-year-old playwright. Police said a suicide note was found. She said it was an accident.

Next day she and Kingsley confirmed a previous announcement that they were engaged to be married.

Kingsley is in Hollywood now, but the two rarely have been seen together, and it's supposed that the romance has been filed under "Errors."

Restless

Talking with Miss Dudley, you think of two worn adjectives—piquant and vivacious. She isn't beautiful, but her eyes are large, her smile engaging, and she has a mobility of expression which has greatly impressed Hollywood higher-ups. She's lean and has a lot of nervous vitality.

While wearing shorts—which she almost always wears, not overalls—she twists around like an uneasy small boy—now with a leg over a chair and next with a knee drawn up under her chin. The nail on each big toe is lacerated scarlet.

She told of her brief acting career: "Last year I was determined to do something, but I was too skinny to a model. So dad gave me letters to a lot of producers and I went around looking for a part in a play. The letters took me into the offices all right, but nobody would hire me."

Couldn't Fool Jake

"So I quit in the middle of the list and went home and read 10 plays. Then I went back to call on the producers I hadn't seen. When they asked me about experience I recited off the names of those plays and said I had appeared in them in summer

Hollywood

By Paul Harrison

HOLLYWOOD—Doris Dudley says that isn't true at all about her being temperamental or eccentric or "Hollywood." Indeed, she can't imagine how the report got around.

The minute the announcement was made that Miss Dudley was coming to Hollywood from Broadway to appear in "Portrait of a Rebel" with Katharine Hepburn, people began predicting that there would be some new and spectacular fireworks in talkietown. And scarcely had she arrived than gossip began to go around that the actress was hep to all the Hepburn tricks; that she was inaccessible, dodged cameras, high-tailed everyone, and was spending her time dashing around in an open Rolls-Royce while wearing a tattered pair of overalls.

Fact is, says the 19-year-old daughter of a New York newspaperman, she hasn't been inside a Rolls-Royce, and she is trying to be gracious to everybody.

"And I don't want to be likened to Miss Hepburn," she protests. "Of course, I admire her enormously. But such comparisons are likely to be fatal to any young actress. If she can't be just an individual, she might as well quit."

Back in New York, of course, Miss Dudley did have a somewhat spectacular record of impulsiveness. Began by getting married when she was 14. Her father, when he heard about it, said it was all right. But the marriage was annulled. She has a 2-year-old son, Theodore Kurris, Jr.

Drouth Strategy

(Roosevelt to Confer With Drouth State Governors)

HARRY GRAYSON

There has been no let up on the vast amount of money which the New England public has been waging on the races. . . . The daily average handle for 53 days at Suffolk Downs was $400,000. . . . Even those connected with the East Boston oval did not look for any such betting. . . . The craze has exceeded all expectations. . . . Narragansett, the gold mine, now expects to break its phenomenal record, and a banner meeting is anticipated at Rockingham, starting in late September. . . . Promised a reward for his tip on Denny Galehouse when the big boy made good, C. A. Thornberry of Akron has just received a check for $200 and an annual pass from the Cleveland club. . . . Even the St. Louis Browns could afford a scout like that. . . . Bill Walker, transferred to Toronto, was the last member of the Cardinals' 1933 trade with the Giants to depart from Sportsman's Park. . . . Ethian Allen, Bob O'Farrell, and Jim Mooney were the others. . . . Bill Terry plucked Gus Mancuso and Ray Starr. . . . Connie Mack has not been chased from the dugout by an umpire in all his 36 years as manager of the Athletics. . . . Bob Grove, who is talking of retiring this fall, is reputed to be worth $100,000. . . . Burgess Whitehead, traded to the Giants for Tarzan Farnelle last winter, is fooling the Cardinal management by standing up and starting under a full season's play and starting under a full season's play. . . . Florida will be shy three customers during the training season next spring. . . . The Giants go to Havana, the Athletics to Mexico, and the Browns to San Antonio. . . . Jimmy Dykes gives Coach Muddy Ruel a deal of credit for the excellent work of the White Sox pitchers last year and this. . . . A semi-professional catcher works with Cardinal chukkers in the bull pen. . . . Joe DiMaggio is well on his way to a home run record for first year men in the majors.

Beware of Three C's

Eleanor Holm Jarrett drank herself out of the Olympic Games. . . . Joe Church, the boxer, pounced himself out. . . . Irving Pense, Toronto middleweight, was sent home because he ate himself out of his class. . . . Jack Torrence beat himself at the table. . . . Future Olympic teams will beware of the three C's: champagne, cameras, and chow. . . . It looks like Wisconsin and its new coach, Harry Stuhldreher, will be without Eddie Jankowski, star fullback, this fall. . . . Scholastic difficulties. . . . Even the Brooklyn Dodgers picked up when Casey Stengel finally was convinced that games are won in the afternoon and not out morning practice. . . . Frank Demaree of the Cubs is likened to Riggs Stephenson. . . . Never spectacular, but consistently dependable stock.

Jake Shubert caught me up on that. He asked if I knew Lawrence Langner and I said no. He said that was very strange indeed, because two of the plays I had mentioned had been produced by Langner at his playhouse in Westport. Mr. Shubert laughed and was nice about it, but he didn't give me a job.

Eddie Dowling hired me, though. His show didn't open on Broadway, but it gave me a start. I had the lead in "Stick in the Mud." I was in "The Season Changes," and finally the genuine lead in "End of Summer."

Signed Up

By this time Miss Dudley had an agent, and Hollywood talent scouts were angling for her. Now she has an RKO contract.

"I'm sorry I haven't anything startling to say," resumed Miss Dudley. "And I can't live up to my advance billings. In restaurants people seem to expect me to throw plates and they act disappointed when I don't."

both in the outfield and at the plate, especially in clinches. . . . Halfback Frank Bruder has agreed to return to the Green Bay Packers for his sixth straight year with the professionals. . . . The Yankees sent Ted Kleinmann to Newark for another southpaw. . . . Kemp Wicker, who begged to doct games for the Bears. . . . Pat Malone was called to his Altoona, Pa., home by the critical illness of his father. . . . One by one the Giants are toppling their season's jinxes. . . . Carl Hubbell took a kame from Curt Davis of the Cubs, one of the Polo Grounders' worst righthanded pitching hoodoos. . . . The ladies' jinx was quieted. . . . The sinister Ebbets Field influence was overcome. . . . About the only remaining jinx for Bill Terry's outfit to contend with is Larry French of the Cubs, who has seven consecutive victories over the Giants, including three this season. . . . The best thing about Young Horace Stoneham's array over the last five weeks is the briskness with which they bounce back after a reverse.

Americans Best Routers

National League pitchers generally are supposed to be superior to their American League brethren. . . . Yet figures show that those of the junior circuit have turned in nearly 100 more complete contests. . . . A good share of the Giants' success is attributed to their having adopted the St. Louis Cardinal and Cincinnati system of light rewards for noble deeds and assessments for flops and skulls, with the pot to be split 24 ways when the last shot has been fired. . . . WHY PAVE STREETS WITH CONCRETE?

here's why —

- 1 Every street demands a gritty, non-skid surface for the protection of motorists and pedestrians.
- 2 At night you need a pavement with high visibility.
- 3 Safety also calls for a pavement that is free from chuck holes, ruts and bumps . . . and stays that way with minimum maintenance.
- 4 You want a pavement that drains quickly . . . that is easily cleaned and stays clean . . . no depressions to catch dirt.
- 5 You want a pavement that makes the whole neighborhood look modern, prosperous, attractive.

Concrete . . . and only concrete . . . completely meets all of these specifications.

Rise in Price of Corn Very Sharp

1936 Boom Greater Even Than Gain in July 1934 Drouth Season

AMES, Iowa.—(AP)—Two State college agriculture economists say that the July boom in corn prices was one of the sharpest on record, even sharper than during July of 1934, drouth year.

"The price of oats, barley, wheat and other corn substitutes will determine in large measure in the next few months, however, what corn can sell for," they said. "Already some western feeders are reported feeding wheat in place of corn."

Cardinal subsidiaries became presidents of two of the three AA leagues. George Trautman of the American Association and Warren Giles of the International. . . . Branch Rickey now is looking over the Pacific Coast League field. . . . Dizzy Dean hops through the hoop when Pepper Martin, his closest pal, snaps his fingers. . . . Paul Dean is urging Dizzy to let him do the fighting on the grounds that it won't hurt the Red Birds if he is given the bum's rush. . . . Bookmakers throughout the country took a bath when Idle Way came down in front in the third at Washington Park the other afternoon. . . . No handicapper is much as mentioned the steel. . . . Mouse Earnshaw asks teammates to pinch him. . . . Wanted to know if it's a dream or if it really is true that he is with the Gas House Gang and not on the banks of the Cohanus. . . . The crippled Reds have a great deal to say about the National League pennant. . . . They still have 10 games with the Cubs, nine with the Cardinals, and five with the Giants. . . . Charley Grimm beat a hasty retreat when Ripper Collins told him that the Cubs choked up against the Detroit Tigers in the world series last fall and that it was absolutely necessary for the Cardinals to battle the Yankees this trip. . . . Collins says that Billy Herman of the Bruins is so two-base hit crazy that he stops at second base on a home run.

My Creed

To live as gently as I can;
To be, no matter where, a man;
To take what comes of good or ill;
And cling to faith and honor still;
To do my best, and let that stand;
The record of my brain and hand;
And then, should failure come to me
Still work and hope for victory.
To leave some simple mark behind
To keep my having lived in mind;
If enmity to aught I show,
To be an honest, generous foe,
To play my little part, now while
That greater honors are not mine.
This, I believe, is all I need
For my philosophy and creed.

Late Will Rogers' Greatest
Picture in Return Engagement

"State Fair," playing a return engagement at the Saenger Thursday and Friday, is remembered not only as Will Rogers' greatest picture, but is also famous in that the roles of each of the leading players were the type of parts which brought them their greatest success.

Janet Gaynor, co-starred with Rogers, and Lew Ayres are the sweethearts of a romance between a little farm girl and a dashing newspaper reporter and Sally Ellers and Norman Foster are the principals of another affair, sophisticated and amusing.

Frank Craven plays Rogers' wife, Frank Craven appears as a country storekeeper, and Victor Jory portrays a carnival stand barker.

Rogers, of course, fulfills his famous role of a Midwestern farmer, whose greatest ambition is to win first prize in the stock competition with his champion hog, Blue Boy.

LIBRARY NOTES

Some splendid new books have just been received at the library.

Two especially recommended by Mrs. Roosevelt are, "Gone With the Wind," by Margaret Mitchell, which epitomizes the whole drama of the South under the impact of the war and the aftermath; not a war story except as it affected the lives of the people of the South.

"Time Out of Mind," by Ruth Fielding.

"The American Flag," by Kathleen Norris.

"If We Had Four Apples," a humorous story of a present-day family.

A book of fifty pictures (masterpieces) with a history of the artist and the picture, especially adapted for children.

Other stories for children by Kellogg, Tarkington and other well known authors.

WITH THE LADIES

By Helen Weidman

If women were the recipient of economic chivalry, instead of the coatacross-a-river puddle version, she would not now be plunged into distress, on mass, she has been granted equality with men when it comes to voting at the polls; she is accepted on a party so far as the right to earn her own living is concerned. The joke in the case, however, lies in the fact that she is governed by a man-made constitution which prevents her from insuring protection of her pay envelope.

Though women's collective distress is not so sensational as the individual cases that have been thrown on the world's front pages, the resultant tragedy is greater.

The trouble started when Joseph Tiplado, manager of a laundry in Brooklyn, was charged with tampering with his records in order to show that he had paid the minimum wage to the women employed in his laundry.

Eventually the case reached the Supreme Court, and the decision now points the way to lower wages for any woman in any state. The verdict of the Supreme Court blocks both federal and state regulation of wages for women and imperils regulatory laws in at least 18 states. The decision added tens of thousands of recruits to the army of ladies in distress. It is the fundamental bread and butter distress against which women, unaided, have no recourse.

Women's Field in Industry Expands Rapidly

As the wheels of the Industrial Revolution have gained momentum, women have been drawn into the labor markets. Living has grown more complicated with the progress of the years. One needs to make more expenditures now than in the days when food, clothing and shelter composed a trinity of needs. Consequently one must have more money. History demonstrates that people have never demanded money unless they have felt the need of it. No woman, therefore, seeks a "hoarding" wage. She merely wants a decent living.

The guarantee that no employer would be permitted to pay less, it appears, is the thing that has been denied the laboring woman, for the moment at least, for as any state or federal help is concerned.

When women lived at home, and were cared for by the male members of their families, there was no problem of wage scales for women. There was little work for women in those early days. When circumstances sent them outside the home they taught, nursed or went into domestic service. Women, in immense numbers, had not invaded industry. Consequently there was no need for legislation on state or federal wage acts.

When Knight Gallant Turns Employer

Today, when it is as necessary for women, in many cases, to make their own living as it is for their brothers; when a woman is frequently the sole wage earner for a family group; when a husband may have to depend on his wife's income, in part, at least, for the sustaining of his home; when women are doing men's work—today, women need money! And they are confronted by the need to take what they can get for their toil, left to the mercy of the shrewd bargainer.

The same man who would carry her across a torrent or a puddle likely as not would take advantage of her need for a job to exact the maximum of work for the minimum of pay.

Woman's Plight Created Paradox on Equality

After all, common sense tells us that any woman, given her choice, would prefer to bake pies and cookies in her own clean, bright kitchen; put up glasses of colored jelly; sit down for an hour or two when the beds are made and the dishes washed; and know that the bills are paid—any woman would prefer such a program to one that calls for the pins, needles or bolts, hour after hour, that often as not doesn't pay her enough for a good hamburger sandwich when the clock strikes twelve.

Long, long ago, when women were little more than slaves, their problems of labor were individualized. A woman whose husband worked her, too hard could seek no relief. Today, when women work side by side, at least they can band together to demand their simple rights. You can't blame them for being puzzled in an order that avows a fine social conscience or a chivalrous hangover yet makes it impossible to establish protection against exploiters of their labor.

Russia's Leader Forecasts a War

Stalin Addresses Troops, Although His Government Denies It

LONDON, Eng.—(P)—Soviet Dictator Josef Stalin, the Evening News said Wednesday in a speech broadcast to every barracks and parade ground in Russia declared "war is imminent."

(In Moscow Wednesday night the Russian government officially denied that Stalin or any other army leader had broadcast a speech Wednesday. It was said that Stalin never speaks over the radio, and that reports to this effect were canards of suspicious origin.)

"At any moment you may be called upon to lay down your lives in protection of the proletarian birthland," Stalin was quoted by the newspaper as having told Russia's soldiers. "We are on the very eve of momentous events. Enemies are getting into position—so be ready."

Reporting Stalin's words as contained in one of the "three most warlike speeches Russia's fighting forces ever heard," the newspaper said they were broadcast along with militaristic speeches by Klement E. Voroshilov, commissar of war and marine; Marshal Mikhail Tukhachevsky, vice commissar of defense; and M. A. K. Astrov, head of the military air force. The speeches, the newspaper said, were addressed to virtually all Russia's fighting men, numbered between 1,300,000 and 1,500,000.

The Russian army is equipped with 5,000 airplanes and many tanks. It has been called the greatest, peace-time army the world has ever known.

It is believed that he army in the Far East along the borders of Mongolia and Manchukuo numbers between 250,000 and 400,000 men with untold thousands of other fighting men facing Germany and her increased army of more than 1,000,000 men.

MECHANIC WHO BECAME A GREAT ARTIST

IN the Louvre, in Paris, hangs the famous Mona Lisa, portrait of a woman whose mysteriously smiling lips and devilish eyes have mystified the art world. In the refectory of the Santa Maria della Grazia cathedral in Milan hangs another great painting, depicting "The Last Supper." Both masterpieces are the work of a man who believed himself a better mechanic than artist—Leonardo da Vinci.

This genius, who lived from 1452 to 1519, had an abundance of brilliant ideas, but few ever came to completion. Besides the two great paintings, his famed works included a remarkable equestrian statue, which was destroyed later. He is believed to have drawn the first design for an airplane. He invented various engines of war, and other mechanical devices. Even his sketches of paintings he never completed are considered masterpieces.

In tribute to Da Vinci's thoughts of flight, Italy in 1935 issued a set of air-mail stamps on one of which the great master is shown.

Senate May Hear About This Holdup

Senator Reynolds, Foe of Foreigners, Is Robbed by Mexicans

By PRESTON GROVER
Associated Press Correspondent
WASHINGTON. — The incident in which Senator Reynolds of North Carolina was robbed of several hundred dollars by Mexican bandits must have caused a chuckle or two among those who remembered how bitterly he had attacked aliens in the last session of congress.

There are grounds for belief that the fight he put up then to compel deportation of some 2,800 deportable aliens may have to be fought all over in the coming session.

Wash. Editor. — By means of a filibuster he prevented passage of a bill sponsored by the immigration bureau which would have permitted about 2,800 aliens with family connections to remain in this country although they were subject to deportation because of illegal entry.

The bureau described them as hardship cases, explaining that some of the aliens had lived in this country from 10 to 30 years, and had established themselves as good neighbors, but under the law were subject to immediate deportation.

The bureau argued, however, that relief for these 2,800 was only a small part of the bill; that its real merit lay in provisions under which an estimated 20,000 undesirable "criminal type" aliens could be deported.

Reynolds centered his fire on the 2,800. He brought some of their case histories before the senate and represented them to be anything but undesirable citizens. So the bill died and the bureau of immigration had no alternative but to proceed with the deportation.

Deportation Slow
But inquiry at the bureau indicates that the wheels of deportation move slowly. There was no information whether many or any of the 2,800 had been deported although the deportation machinery had been ordered to roll.

It developed, one immigration official said, that some were entitled to reinstatement. Other routine cases caused delays.

There is basis for surmise that when congress convenes next January there will be quite a few of the deportables still in this country subject to relief by a new bill.

But Senator Reynolds hasn't indicated he would relent.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—may be relieved when treated in the right way.

"The kidneys are one of Nature's chief ways of taking acids and wastes out of the blood. A healthy person should pass about 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter.

If the 16 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, waste stays in the body and may become poisonous. It may start nagging backaches, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Don't let it lay you up.

Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills—used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help to flush out the 15 miles of kidney tubes. Get Doan's Pills.

Judith

OBVIOUSLY to the passing of the day, forgetting to be impatient at Steve's tardiness, Judith fell to musing about those four years. As clearly as if it had been day before yesterday she remembered their meeting. It was at a skating party arranged by Virginia Bent, and it had been Virginia who had fixed the "date" between Judith and Steve. On the way home that night, snug with a robe in the back seat of Robert Bent's car, Steve had talked with her in a low, bantering tone.

"Do you remember the October of 1929?" he had asked. Judith laughed. "I've heard my elders talk about it. Wasn't there a market crash?"

"Crash? Say, airplanes crash sometimes, and automobiles crash frequently. But a market does something worse than that. I don't think there's a word for it!" Judith smiled when she thought of that. Everyone had still been talking about "the crash" then. Nobody—yet—was willing to believe in a depression.

"But the reason I brought it up," Steve had said, "was because I..."

"Well?"

He looked down at her, and she had been unable to tell whether or not he was serious. "If I'd met you before that fatal October, I think we'd be Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Fowler by this time."

Judith remembered that, standing there in front of the big office building where she worked. In front of the big office building where, because of the depression, she had dropped from a position as secretary down to a job as typist—and an overworked typist at that.

He had taken her skates with him on that first night because, he said, he knew of the "only place in town" where they could be properly sharpened. And of course, once they were sharpened, he had to return them to her. That was the beginning. She did not remember so clearly all that had happened between then and now. There had been happy moments; but there had been fearful ones, too, because they were in love.

She wouldn't have traded any of them. She wouldn't have wanted to go back to that first day, and relive those last four years without Steve Fowler. And yet... yet she knew that they couldn't go on forever, being engaged and in love. Steve knew it, too. But he always wanted to wait a little while longer. It had been a blow to him when he had stopped being a sales manager and become only a salesman with a quota to meet instead of a quota to set. But gradually he had forgotten that, and had started to work with a will. Gradually he was climbing back—but not fast enough to suit him. Not to the point where he felt he should marry.

FROM the very first, Judith had favored a marriage wherein she retained her job and helped out with the expenses. But Steve could never quite see it. Steve had always had the idea that a husband should support his wife wholly, and support her well. Because he couldn't do it he had become increasingly bitter and difficult.

"I'm tired of hearing these kids out of school wailing because they can't get a job," he told Judith one day. "And I'm just as tired of hearing these old boys in their white-lined waistcoats yelling that things aren't what they used to be. At least the kids have everything before them, and the old boys have something to remember. But the fellows around my age are stuck right. A little too old to learn, and a little too young to have piled up any advantage before the crash came."

"You mustn't get bitter," Judith had warned sensibly. "You have to remember that few men held on to the 'advantage' they'd managed to pile up. Right now, Steve, you're better off than the man I work for. You don't owe any money, and you haven't any obligations to keep people employed. You haven't taxes that..."

"Just the same, sometimes I wonder if I don't belong to the faded lot generation."

"It's not like you, Steve, to indulge in self-pity," Judith told him.

CHAPTER I-A
THAT conversation had been typical of dozens they had gone through the past year or so. It seemed to Judith that all their recent meetings degenerated into bickerings that got nowhere. And the frightening thing was that Steve was changing. He was no longer the old, considerate Steve. It was as if his impotence against economic conditions had turned him inward toward himself instead of outward toward the girl he loved.

Judith was afraid—and because she was afraid she had resolved to make one final effort to convince Steve that her original proposition had been right. He had a good job with a promising future, and she had a passable job which would help things out until Steve's future transformed itself into the present. It was so utterly simple. It was so utterly sane. And Stephen Fowler must be made to see that it was both.

If he didn't...

Protectively, Judith's mind clicked shut against that possibility. Days ago she had made up her mind as to her course if he still refused to be sensible. But she did not want to think about it now. She did not want to believe that he'd fail to choose Judith Howard if he had to choose between her and his foolish pride.

"Hello, Judith. . . . Darned sorry I'm late. Fellow dropped in just as I was leaving, and I couldn't get away."

Startled by Steve's voice at her shoulder, she turned swiftly, and there must have been a part of her thoughts reflected in her eyes, for he added: "What's up, Judith? You look as if you had something on your mind."

"I have, Steve. Can we go somewhere for lunch where we can talk?"

"Sure thing," said Steve, troubled. "We can get a booth at this place around the corner."

HE did not speak again until they were settled in the little cafe. When they had ordered, he leaned toward her and said: "Shoot, darling. I hope nothing serious has happened."

"I hope it isn't serious, either," she smiled weakly. "This is leap year, Steve. I'm going to propose to you."

He sat back, relief written large on his face. "Gosh. . . . When I saw you there in front of the building I thought you'd had bad news from home or something. If it's just a leap year proposal, why—I can take it!"

"Can you, Steve? That's what I want to know."

Steve took her by the shoulders and turned her to face him. "Look here, Judith," he said. "We've been in love for four years. It can't be cut off in a minute like this."

He regarded her a moment. "Look here, Judith, what are you getting at? I hope you haven't got me in a corner just to bring up the old question."

"That's just what I've done," she told him evenly. "I'm doing it here where you can't put your arms around me and argue me out of it, Steve. There's going to be no kisses and no tears this time. I don't want to go on like this. We've waited four years. What if we waited four more?"

"But that's absurd!" he exclaimed. "Things are picking up in fine shape. Why, only today the boss was saying that—"

"Then we might as well marry," Steve. I promise you I'll quit my job the moment you're getting what you consider an adequate salary."

Steve's eyes narrowed. "You know how I feel about that. I won't have my wife working. If a man can't support a girl, he hasn't a right to ask her to marry him."

"It appears that I'm asking you, Steve. Would that make any difference?"

"Virginia had nothing to do with it. You know me well enough to know that I can't come to a decision on my own. Steve. . . . But that's what Virginia thinks, and I know it. She never misses a chance to tell you how delightfully happy she and Bob are—"

"And they are happy," "No doubt," said Steve shortly. "But I'm not Bob Bent."

UNCERTAINLY Judith got to her feet. "I'm afraid I don't feel like eating. I'll . . . just go back to the office."

"Judith! Judy, darling," Steve was instantly contrite. Hastily he grabbed his hat and walked out of the cafe close to her side. "I didn't mean to get so completely sore. We can't discuss this thing sensibly on the street, Judith. Let me come to your apartment tonight."

She shook her head. "That's no good, Steve. It—"

Headless of passersby he took her by the shoulders and turned her to face him. "Look here, Judith. We've been in love for four years. We're in love right now. It can't be cut off in a minute like this. I won't let it be."

"But it's got to be," Judith told him, trying to keep back the tears and not succeeding very well. "I've thought it all out, Steve. It isn't just a spur of the moment thing. I've—I've seen it coming for a long time. Now please let me go. Please . . . people are staring."

"All right, then," His hands dropped to his sides. "But I'm coming over tonight."

As fast as possible Judith sped toward the building, scurried into one of the "up" cars. She reached the office dressing room none too soon, for hardly was she inside the door before the tears welled up in her eyes. Unmindful that the rest of the girls would soon be returning from lunch, she leaned her head against the wall and sobbed.

The door opened suddenly and Virginia Bent entered. Quickly her arms went around Judith and she led her to a chair. "Now you and Steve outside, and I'll get something was up. What happened, Judith?"

"I—I told him I was through," Virginia nodded sagely. "You'll live to thank yourself for it. He's a stubborn fool. A girl can't grow old waiting for a man to become a millionaire, Judith. Let me tell you something. Any man who can't understand that a girl might like love in a kitchen apartment today, rather than an ermine coat tomorrow maybe, is too dumb to make a good husband!"

New York Giants Win 14 Straight

19th Victory for Carl Hubbell, and His 9th Consecutive Win

CINCINNATI, Ohio.—(AP)—The New York Giants' winning streak reached 14 straight Wednesday as Carl Hubbell pitched the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-to-5 defeat, although he almost blew the game in the ninth. The triumph was his 19th of the season and his ninth straight since July 13.

The victory tightened the Giants' grip on first place in the National League, giving them their second straight win over the Reds.

Staked to a four-run lead in the first inning, Hubbell had only to coast in, but the Reds, after scoring a run each in the first, fifth and sixth, rallied in the ninth for two more runs. The tying run was on second but Hubbell retired the next two batters.

Earl Gooden got three hits and Les Searsella, the rookie first baseman, drove two runs in with a pair of hits.

Paul Derringer started for the Reds but was staked out for a pinch-batter in the sixth. Lee Stine and Benny Frey wound up but Derringer was charged with the defeat.

According to Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook, recently appointed chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, one rigid airship can do the work of three cruisers, though it costs less than one.

It's A Stewart-Warner Year BECAUSE OF "SAV-A-STEP"

Amazing new feature saves work . . . saves money . . . and actually increases FRONT SHELF SPACE over 30%

HERE'S the most useful refrigerator ever built—and it won't take you two minutes to prove it to yourself! Because this new Stewart-Warner is actually designed for you—with a dozen surprise features like SAV-A-STEP, SLID-A-TRAY and TILT-A-SHELF that let you arrange foods as you wish, give more get-at-able space than other refrigerators a full size larger, and save you hours and dollars.

The biggest feature of all is Stewart-Warner's new invention, SAV-A-STEP. It holds all the foods you use oftentimes right where they're easiest to reach—swings smoothly on its own hinges to turn back shelves into front shelf space—snaps securely onto the door if you prefer it there—carries everything needed for a whole meal to the kitchen table at one trip—and saves the current wasted by repeated opening of the refrigerator.

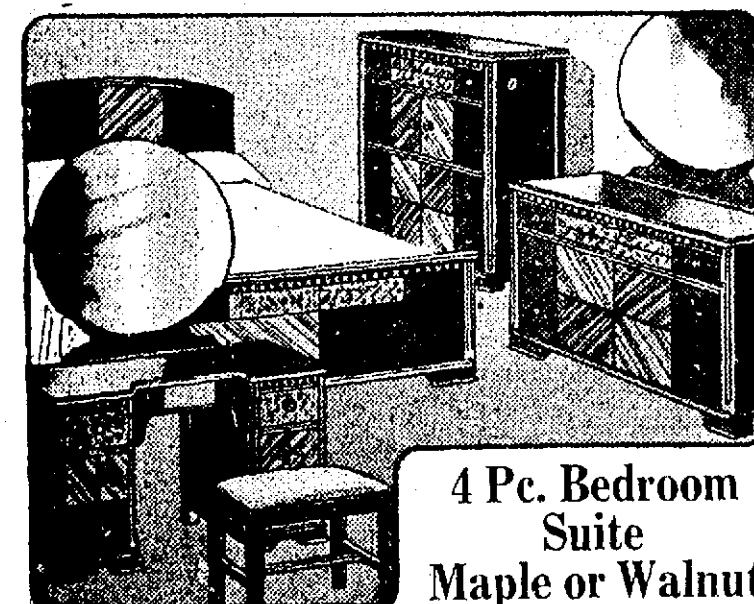

What's more, you can have all these great Stewart-Warner features now on easier terms than we've offered before—making the payments in surprisingly small monthly installments. See us at once for details—without obligation.
